Campaigning in the era of COVID-19

If I had been asked to write my campaign statement 6 weeks ago, it would have been an easy task. I would have told you that my goals were to advance immigration reform and educate our politicians about the importance of comprehensive and fair immigration laws.

I would have told you that the most important thing to me was creating an AILA community where we are all working together to create a successful and powerful association of immigration practitioners from all over the world.

However, as I sit here today-- I would be lying to say that I feel well prepared to pursue those stated goals for this organization. Right now, I feel like I am fighting for survival and making it through each day is a success. My reason for wanting to be re-elected to the BOG is for the sole purpose of doing something good at a time where things are so bad for so many. I have no expertise in disaster preparedness or economic recovery, but I am a warrior and I know that I am strong and will find a way to survive. I am resilient and I started from nothing so I have no fear of having to start again. After almost 30 years of practice in immigration law, I know our community and who I am fighting for. I want to support others who may feel uncertain about what lies ahead. I want to support the work that AILA is already doing. I want to make sure we ALL get through this and that no one feels left behind. I want to call on all my experience for you. #AILAALONETOGETHER
